

"All of this technology is scary, but it's also something that we've dealt with before. But that also doesn't mean I'm about to go in and yell and protest and say to stop. You also have to know when to be safe and protect yourself. I don't think the border patrol or the border itself is ever going to go away, so why focus on that alone? I want to protect my family and help keep us safe. There are lots of ways to resist that aren't just about facing off with border patrol. I'm thinking about the really little kids too. The more they see us succeed, the more they see our communities doing well, that's what I can focus on. That's what I can contribute to. Today, tomorrow, the next day, the future one day at a time."

-Luis

El Paso, TX