

"I wish I could know how to help other people resist more than me. I'm Latino but some people don't even believe me because I'm really fair skinned, so I don't get the same treatment as guys darker than me. I know there's all the jokes about me as the guerito and that's just how we joke, but it's also really real. My whole family is different shades, but it kills me to see different treatment not just in my own family. I just never know how to start or what to say."
